ANDREW MELLON TLS * 169

ANDREW W. MELLON (1855-1937); Financier; Industrialist; Secretary of the Treasury. Mellon was a Pittsburgh banker and industrial visionary who was almost single handedly responsible for the development of entire industries (aluminum, carborundum) and heavily involved in the founding of several large industrial enterprises whose names are today recognized worldwide. At the time he was appointed Treasury Secretary in the Harding administration, he was one of the world's wealthiest men. He remained Secretary of the Treasury throughout the Harding and Coolidge administrations, and was undoubtedly the most influential member of these administrations, 1931 Typed Letter Signed on Secretary of the Treasury letterhead to Colonel Judson Spofford: "...I note your views on the cancellation of foreign war debts, and thank you for your kind expressions of approval...A. Mellon" Colonel Judson Spofford was the last Union survivor of the Civil War battle of Monocacy, Md, He mustered into "K" Co. VT 10th Infantry in 1862 and was wounded in 1865 at Petersburg, Va. His 1937 obituary describes how he was with "the Force that Prevented D.C. Invasion" With Sec. Of Treasury stamped envelope address to the elderly civil war soldier. Fold marks, light wear, Fine.

THE MOST DRAMATIC ORATOR IN THE AMERICAN ANTISLAVERY MOVEMENT

* 177

WENDELL PHILLIPS (1811-1884) a Prominent abolitionist from 1837, President of the Anti-Slavery Society from 1865-1870. So highly regarded were his oratorical abilities that he was known as "abolition's Golden Trumpet". Like many of his fellow abolitionists, Phillips took pains to eat no cane sugar and wear no clothing made of cotton, since both were produced by the labor of Southern slaves. It was Phillips's contention that racial injustice was the source of all of society's ills. Like William Lloyd Garrison, Phillips denounced the Constitution for tolerating slavery.

Autograph Letter Signed. 4pp. 5" x 8". n.p. 4 Dec '81. Phillips writes to a fellow lawyer and friend, Mr. Dyer: "There is no setting ahead of you

* 178

GEORGE PATTON, SR. (1833 – 1864) The grandfather of George S. Patton of World War II fame.

1p Autograph Letter Signed. Jan. 30, 1860 from George Patton Sr to his cousin Andrew dated January 30, 1860:

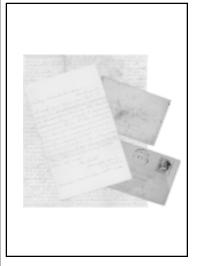

"Dear Cousin Andrew, We forgot to ask you before you left to inquire particularly in regard to passenger fare on The Ocean Steamers from N. York to Aspinwald and from thence to San Francisco. The ratio for children servants & c...G.S. Patton"

The second letter, a 2pp ALS written from Richmond on February 19, 1863 details the family's upcoming move, general family news and the family's beloved bible:

"My dearest husband... I write word to say that you have my full and free consent to sell our house and lot ... As for the furniture I think ... possessions such as the bed ... bureaus and stands ... book case ... table and chairs also kitchen furniture of all kinds.... Don't forget to take good care of our family bible and should you conclude to send your books out don't forget it ... Don't spend your gold if your money won't hold out borrow or get on credit and by economy you will pay in a short time. The money I have will last me a long time especially if you can get things for me... If you get a waggon to bring out the things I have written on I think you might send salt enough to pay expenses It is right funny for me to be writing this which I have very idea that you all are going down there, for you did not evidently have the least idea of it when you wrote your last letter but I think it will to be on the safe side so don't laugh at one of this finds you quietly sitting down at Lewisburg ...Should you all continue campaigning out in the West I shall certainly come to Lewisburg or somewhere where I can hope to see you occasionally. I felt truly sorry to hear of little ... Sumner's death. His poor mother, how much she will grieve for him...your ... wife S.G.P."

The letter is difficult to read as it was cross-written due to a lack of paper during the confederacy. George S. Patton' Jr's father was Brigadier General George Smith Patton (1833 - 1864). He served in the 22nd Virginia Infantry CSA. He was among the casualties of the Battle of Opequon (the Third Battle of Winchester). He left behind a namesake son who was born in Charleston, West Virginia, when that state was still part of Virginia. The second George Smith Patton was only a child during the American Civil War. He graduated from the Virginia Military Institute in 1877. The father was a friend of John Singleton Mosby, a cavalry hero of the Confederacy, serving first under J.E.B. Stuart and then as a guerrilla fighter. The younger Patton grew up hearing Mosby's stories of military glory. Apparently inspired by them, from an early age the young Patton sought to become a general and hero in his own right.

my bar friend – and reading over and over you exquisitely words – just the sweetest of all notes" as my wife keeps saying. I feel sort of nervous in trying my 'rentice hand, as Bacus says, at telling you how very beautiful your flowers were – how welcome...."

Phillips goes on to relay a song to his friend, then: "...but even without Ben Johnson in my view, my vote's nothing to yours – Please just think of the most grateful things you could say if you were touched to the very heart & then fancy me saying it – if you can - & it will be alright... Wendell Phillips." Light toning to folds on last page, else Fine.

HIGHLY IMPORTANT EDMUND RANDOLPH LETTER REGARDING THE PARDON-ING OF PRISONERS: "I BEG LEAVE TO CONSIGN THE WRETCHED CONDITION OF THE PRISONERS TO YOUR IMMEDIATE ATTENTION..."

* 182

EDMUND RANDOLPH (1753 – 1813) A member of the Constitutional Convention, Randolph was the first Attorney General and then Washington's second Secretary of State, but resigned after being falsely charged with bribery. He later represented Aaron Burr in his treason trial.

An autograph letter signed "Edm. Randolph", addressed to The Honorable Speaker of the House of Delegates, with the integral leaf docketed in another hand, neatly inlaid. In part: "the general assembly will collect his distress for money, and the dreadful consequence to his unfortunate prisoners, if that distress be not immediately removed. In the contingent fund, to which resort is regularly to be had on these occasions, not a shilling can be found: and the executive cannot approve the expedient of borrowing from other funds during the session of the legislature. I therefore beg leave to consign the wretched condition of the prisoners to your immediate attention, and to request, that some certain provisions be made for them in [the] future. The act authorizing the executive to grant conditional pardons being about to expire on the last day of this month; I am advised to inform the assembly that it is probable in the eye of the law, that in case of a motion to the general court to award execution de novo on a criminal already conditionally pardoned, who may have escaped and may be retaken after that day - the court could not proceed against him. It is therefore submitted, how far it may be fit, to declare that this law, notwithstanding its expiration shall justify anew award of execution for any breach of the condition committed, while it was in force. It will perhaps be proper too to remind the assembly that from the peculiar phraseology of that act it may be necessary to continue the power of outlawing, in order to give affect to the other parts of it..." BENJAMIN SILLIMAN (1816-1885). Famous American scientist who worked at Yale, Silliman taught geology, chemistry and mineralogy. His work included improving mines and chemical manufacturing, editing the American Journal of Science and establishing the National Academy of Sciences.

JOAQUIM BISHOP, Early American Camera Maker, chemist, instrument maker and machinist. It is known that Bishop made daguerreian cameras for Dr. P.B. Goddard and Robert Cornelius. He crafted the earliest cameras in Philadelphia, and constructed the camera for Goddard between October and November, 1839, following the drawings of Daguerre's apparatus. The specific camera, which traveled through the family of J. Sartain, is in the Franklin Institute. He later founded J. Bishop & Co. Platinum Works.

Signed Check issued to "Benj. Silliman Esq." July 13, 1840 for $100.00 drawn on the New Haven Bank, endorsed on verso. Vignette of beehive. Toning to left edge and with cancellation punches. He has made the amount payable to a Joaquim Bishop, who also signed this rare check, "J. Bishop."

Some journals suggest Joaquim Bishop helped to make the first daguerreotype camera manufactured in the United States, but the actual day the very first camera is noted as being the first seems to be in dispute during those precious few months after Daguerre made his announcement to the world.

In part, the letter reads: . . . From the first moment this amendment was proposed, I was directly against it, and when it was adopted by the Federal Party in the hope of representations and sent up to the senate in the year 1790 . . . all in my power to, and I believe was instrumental in causing its . . . in that body. But the day of reasoning on the true principles of the constitution is over - the most important articles of your national compact must be constantly called on to guild party and earn personal views -The degradation of the Federal Judiciary by its being now completely placed at the feet of the legislative body only to get rid of obnoxious judges has taught us what we are to expect on subordinate points - In truth I give up this constitution as gone - its death will be lingering - but its sentence has passed - It was only calculated to the administrations by the same kind of men as those who formed it - it proposes nothing which can essentially guard it against the progress of democracy - but perhaps will ultimately be found only to have organized democracy - and given plan and system to it which it never has had in any other country- This will probably prolong the reign of the Demon will give it a . . . which it has had in no other nation - and in the end . . . find little bit of much boasted of Constitution - it will be dissected limb by limb with as much indifference as it felt by a surgeon in cutting up a dead body. I altogether despair of Mr. Condat acting the enlightened heart you seem to take from him - and as to any of the States at present under Democratic Sway into passing . . . form no idea of - the proposed wagon given by Mr. Ketchel in our House of Assembly for an adjourned session was that they might be ready to . . . and act on the proposition . . . Your obliged servant Rd. Stockton." The letter could be in regards to the twelfth amendment that was passed in December of 1803. The twelfth amendment pertains to the Presidential elections. CHARLES SUMNER RECOMMENDS A GEOLOGIST FOR THE DARIEN EXPEDITION

CHARLES SUMNER (1811-1874). American abolitionist; U.S. Senator from Massachusetts during Civil War and reconstruction. Autograph Letter Signed. Two separate pages, 5" x 8". Senate Chamber, [Washington], January 17, 1870. Probably to the Secretary of the Navy, saying: "I find Bowditch Mr. that Boston...would like a place for his son as leveller or rodman on the Darien Expedition. His son is a graduate of the Technological Institute at Boston and his name is Ernest W. Bowditch. I do not doubt he will be an excellent assistant..." Ernest William Bowditch (1850-1918) was, on the recommendation of Sumner, assigned as a as geologist on the Darien expedition. The Darien Expedition in 1870 began a 5-year exploration to survey the Isthmus of Darien (Panama) and "ascertain a point at which to cut a canal from the Atlantic to the Pacific."

Starting in the 1850s, the whole world looked to the Darien Gap in eastern Panama as the site for a glorious canal linking the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. But someone had to survey the land of the Darien Gap. That task fell to the U.S. Darien Exploring Expedition. These brave surveyors, as an editorial comment from a recent book on the expedition wrote: "Misled by the false maps of a fraudulent earlier "explorer," the expedition was faced with two mountain ranges, damp and brutal heat, swarming mosquitoes and flies, a hostile native population, and a catalog of other hardships. The expedition was soon at the brink of disaster: the men's ordeal of starvation, exhaustion, disease, madness, and ultimate despair as they succumbed to the brutal jungle is one of the great untold tales in the history of exploration." WILLIAM BARRET TRAVIS (1809 – 1836) Texas commander at the Battle of the Alamo.

Extremely rare autograph document [unsigned], in the hand of William B. Travis, as secretary of the City Hall ("ayuntamiento"), of San Felipe, Texas, one page, 8" x 5", describing legal actions of September 1831. "Petition for order of payment filed 23rd Sept 1831, same day an order expired. Order...executed 24th Sept. Inst. Pet[ition] for Execution filed 28th Inst same day... Travis arrived in Texas early in 1831, after the Law of April 6, 1830, made his immigration illegal. He arrived at San Felipe de Austin, and on May 21 obtained land from Stephen F. Austin. He listed his marital status as single, although he was still married. He established a legal practice in Anahuac, a significant port of entry located on the eastern end of Galveston Bay. The purpose of the move there was to establish himself in an area where there were few attorneys while he learned the official language, Spanish. He traveled the country doing legal work and became associated with a group of militants who opposed the Law of April 6, 1830. Eventually this group became known as the war party as tension increased between the Mexican government and American settlers in Texas. Travis had many occasions to oppose the commander of the Mexican garrison at Anahuac, Col. John Davis Bradburn, a Kentuckian in the service of Mexico. Bradburn enforced the anti-immigration law, refused to allow state officials to alienate land to American settlers arriving after the passage of the law, and allegedly used materials and slaves belonging to the settlers to build his camp. It was during this eventful time that Travis drafted the document offered here. Fine. $3,000 - up

"COMMODORE" CORNELIUS VANDERBILT SIGNS AN EXQUISITE 7PAGE DOCUMENT CONCERNING THE HUDSON RIVER RAILROAD

A declaration of trust between Vanderbilt and John M. Tobin, of one part, and The Hudson River Rail Road Co., of the other part. Much of the lengthy text describes the boundaries of several tracts of land, adjacent to Harlem River Rail Road prop between Albany and Poughkeepsie purchased Vanderbilt and Tobin from several different parties. The tracts are part of a farm in the vicinity of Stuyvesant and Coxsackie Ferry, and lands in the towns of Stuyvesant and East Greenbush. The final section of the text explains that Vanderbilt and Tobin were paid one dollar each by the HRR and the lands were conveyed to them to be held in trust for the use of the railroad. Signed on page 7 by Vanderbilt, Tobin and Edwin Quackenbush.

After being primarily involved in shipping for years, later in his life Vanderbilt became involved in railroads. Gaining control of The Hudson River Rail Road was his second project in this industry, after he took over its competitor, The New York and Harlem. The transactions documented here must have been part of Vanderbilt's master plan to control the Hudson Valley railroads and consolidate three inefficient operations into a single well-run system. Vanderbilt took control of the third line, the New York Central, in 1867, by the early 1870's he had accomplished his goal. Good condition, with considerable fold repair. SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY WILLIAM WINDOM SIGNS A MINT DOCUMENT JUST DAYS BEFORE HIS STUNNING HEART ATTACK

WILLIAM WINDOM (1827-1891). Garfield's & Harrison's Secretary of the Treasury. Windom proposed a plan for purchases of domestic silver in the open market, and the issuance of certificates redeemable in silver. This was enacted as the Sherman Silver Act of 1890, which also provided for the coinage of silver dollar coins. The death, as the life, of Secretary Windom was dramatic. On January 29, 1891, delivering the last words of a patriotic address before the New York Board of Trade in New York City, he sank to the floor and was dead before anybody could reach his side.

EDWARD SAMUEL LACEY (1835-1916) US Congressman from Michigan; commissioned by President Harrison to be Comptroller of the Currency.

Document signed by the fiery Secretary of the Treasury "William Windom." Treasury Department Office of the Comptroller appointment of Samuel McD. Tate as examiner of the affairs of the National Banking Associations. Dated January 2, 1891, just a few weeks before his stunning death. Signed also by Comptroller E.S. Lacey. In 1891 Windom addressed the New York Board of Trade with the words, "As a poison in the blood permeates arteries, veins, nerves, brain and heart, and speedily brings paralysis or death, so does a debased or fluctuating currency permeate all arteries of trade, paralyze all kinds of business and brings disaster to all classes of people." Seconds later he suffered a heart attack and died.

14" x 10"; with the exception of usual fold marks, in mint condition. Upon Windom's death in 1891, the two-dollar silver certificate was redesigned with his portrait. A remarkably crisp Treasury document from a remarkable man. $200 - up
