 819
1855, New York. One thousand dollar bond bearing seven percent interest. Black. Engraved vignette of a side-wheel steamboat at top center. Ornate border design.

A Nicaraguan corporation, the Accessory Transit Co. was the center of one of "Commodore" Cornelius Vanderbilt's most colorful controversies. Vanderbilt founded the company in 1850 to provide a link between the Atlantic and Pacific to service the traffic to California which was beginning to go via Panama. Procuring a charter from the Nicaraguan government, Vanderbilt's steamships began shuttling passengers and cargo from the east coast of the United States to the east coast of Nicaragua at which point an overland journey was made to steamships waiting on the west coast. By 1853, Vanderbilt had acquired a fortune which he estimated to be $11,000,000 and embarked on the first true vacation of his life, a tour of Europe. While away, William Walker seized control of the Nicaraguan government and allied himself with the Commodore's managers of the company, Charles Morgan and Francis Garrison collectively working together to remove Vanderbilt's charter and seize control of the company. Vanderbilt thus began assisting in the downfall of Walker, Garrison and Morgan issuing a letter which stated "Gentlemen: You have undertaken to cheat me. I won't sue you for the law is too slow. I'll ruin you. Yours truly, Cornelius Vanderbilt" Vanderbilt then began the work of creating a competitive machine proving victorious, ousting Morgan and Garrison and successfully regaining control of the company.
