CASINO ET CONCERTS PAGANINI

*608

1837, France. Stock certificate for one thousand francs. Black/Gold/Blue. Extraordinary vignetted certificate with an ornate border design encircling the printed names of some of the world's greatest composers, writers and thinkers including Shakespeare, Beethoven, Mozart, Gallileo, etc. A nice vignette of the concert hall is flanked by winged allegorical figures at the top. This is truly an exceptionally fine lithographed stock from the 1830's.

Paganini began visiting Paris in 1831. Already well-known for his compositions his fame preceded him. He chose the city as his residence from 1832 - 1833 and returned twice again, in 1834 and 1837. During his final visit to Paris, he met with investors who proposed to build a concert hall named in his honor on the Chaussee d'Antin. He invested 100,000 francs of his personal funds in the venture, only to lose the total amount in a lengthy legal battle. Paganini's artistic abilities deteriorated rapidly following this episode.

An exceptionally graphic and decorative certificate from this early period. Extremely rare certificate to date with only three examples known. Some foxing throughout. Uncancelled and fine.

INTERNATIONAL CINEMA-PLATE COMPANY (BETTINI PATENTS) STOCK

1912. England. Stock certificate for 16 shares. Black/White. Ornate left border. This stock is directly related to the many patents of Gianni Bettini. Bettini a wealthy Italian inventor, founded the Société des Micro-Phonographes after returning from the United States, where he had recorded the music of favorite artists. In 1888, Bettini had become interested in Edison's phonograph, which at that time was only meant to record and play back the spoken word. Because he loved music, he wanted to record songs, but the sound quality of the phonograph did not satisfy him. Bettini improved the recording needle and fashioned a horizontal arrangement of the sound cans. His cylinders cost two to six dollars, as opposed to those that sold for 50 cents. His music cylinders could be used on American phonographs and Bettini set up a studio in New York to record music. However, because of U.S. competition (Edison and Columbia), he returned to Europe. There, he also produced recordings of the speech of famous people like Pope Leo XIII, who died a few months afterwards. Bettini later invented a lighter, improved the acetylene lamp, developed an automatic ball-throwing device for tennis players and developed a cinematography system with moving glass panes. Uncancelled and very fine.
